

DEFENDERS OF THE PHILIPPINES MAKE ORDERLY RETREAT

Wainwright's Men Take Up New Positions on Bataan Under Fierce Pressure

HEAVY BOMBARDMENT

Enemy Pours Wave After Wave of Fresh Troops Into The Fray

WASHINGTON, Apr. 8.—(INS)—Lt. Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright's valiant Philippine defenders have made a general but orderly withdrawal to new defense positions on Bataan under fierce Japanese pressure on all sides, the War Department announced today.

Indicating that the battle of Bataan has reached a desperate stage, the War Department's morning communiqué said "Our troops withdrew during the night of April 7 to a previously prepared position."

The announcement came after four successive days of terrific aerial and land bombardment during which the enemy poured wave after wave of fresh troops into the fray in an effort

Coutant, treasurer's report.

EXONERATE BRISTOL MAN OF BLAME FOR DEATH

Coroner's Jury Discharges Ralph Orrino of Responsibility for Fatal Accident

RELEASED FROM BAIL

A coroner's jury, last night, exonerated Ralph Orrino, 913 Garden street, of all blame in connection with the death of Maurice McIlvaine, 37, 310 Lafayette street. McIlvaine was killed when struck by Orrino's car on Route 13, near the Bristol Cemetery, on the evening of March 20th.

The inquest was held in the Municipal Building, with Bucks County Coroner Dr. H. Clayton Moyer presiding, and Dr. Charles F. Sampsel assisting. Dr. Sampsel testified to having viewed the body at the Harriman Hospital and described the cause of death. Private Phillips, Penna. Motor Police, Oxford Valley Barracks, told of his investigation of the accident, and Orrino took the stand to give his version of the accident.

Orrino told the jury that he was driving west on the Bristol Pike and had passed a car going in the same direction. When he swung back into the right traffic lane he saw McIlvaine not more than eight feet away. Although he swerved his car to the left he could not avoid striking the Bristol man.

Martin Porter, 4615 Blakeston street, Philadelphia, who was driving in the opposite direction, told the jury that he saw the Orrino car swerve. He stopped his car and assisted Orrino in bringing the injured man to the Harriman Hospital where he was pronounced dead upon being admitted.

Claim "Hundreds" of Nazi Planes Destroyed

Moscow—"Hundreds" of Nazi planes have been destroyed in unsuccessful attempts to smash the strategic Russian port of Murmansk, the Red Army newspaper, Red Star, reported today.

Although the Luftwaffe attempted 119 separate raids on Murmansk, through which Russia has been receiving United Nations war supplies, all were ineffective and not a single military or industrial target was hit, Red Star said. Smashing counter action, Red Star said, drove the Germans out of strategic towns on the approaches to the vital port.

The Moscow radio meanwhile reported that Soviet forces, carrying the fight to the Germans along the wide front from the Arctic to the Black Sea, had recaptured an important town on the southwestern front.

The mid-day communiqué of the Red Army said Soviet troops had advanced on the front northwest of Moscow against stubborn resistance. A total of 1,125 Germans were said to have been killed or wounded in one day of fighting.

Organized Labor Pledges All-Out Effort and Unity

Pittsburgh—Proudly reporting that its current production record was unexcelled in history, organized labor answered its critics today with a pledge of those who propose restrictive legislation.

To the cheers of thousands of their followers, their chosen leaders—William Green of the A. F. of L., and Philip Murray of the CIO, took a shoulder and an ever-increasing stream of supplies and munitions and guns and tanks until victory is won.

RAF Planes Attack Calais and Boulogne Areas

London—Royal Air Force planes early today swept over the English Channel to attack the Calais and Boulogne coastal areas of occupied France. The planes charged across the straits in force through cloudy weather. Watchers at Folkestone and neighboring coastal towns reported that they heard waves of fighter planes in the sky at 8 a. m.

Later, they said, vapor trails ascending to a height of 20,000 feet were visible through a clearing over the Calais and Boulogne areas.

WOMAN HURT AS FIRE ENGINE AND PRIVATE CAR COLLIDE TODAY

Mrs. Pauline Perpete, Newportville, Taken to Harriman Hospital

CRASH AT INTERSECTION

Her Car Greatly Damaged; Slight Harm Done Newport Fire Company Engine

A collision involving the Newport Fire Company engine and a private car this morning, resulted in injury to one woman, the driver of the passenger machine.

The injured is Mrs. Pauline Perpete, 28, Newportville, who suffered multiple incised wounds of the scalp and face, contusions of the right elbow and of both knees.

Taken to the Harriman Hospital by Fred Cotshott, Mrs. Perpete remains in that institution for treatment. She is the wife of Stephen Perpete.

According to the report of the investigating officer, Private Phillips of Penna. Motor Police, none of the firemen were injured.

The crash occurred at an intersection near the Newportville bridge which spans the Nesquehanna Creek, the vehicles crashing at right angles. The Perpete car was greatly damaged, and some damage done to the fire engine. No arrests were made.

Mrs. Perpete had returned from her employment at a Philadelphia defense plant, and was enroute to Bristol in her car when the accident occurred. It is stated the fire engine had just crossed the bridge when the collision took place.

CUSTODY OF CHILD DENIED WOMAN WHO KEPT BIRTH SECRET

Judge Calvin S. Boyer Rules Child Be Remanded To Respondents

O-K SCHOOL HOUSE SALE

Lawrence McGlynn, Bristol, Granted A Conditional Parole

DOYLESTOWN, Apr. 8.—Judge Calvin S. Boyer on Monday in a decree handed down in the Court of Common Pleas denied an attractive nurse-mother, Miss Marian A. Ott, 24, Floral Park, Long Island, the custody of a child whose birth she had kept secret from her parents for three years.

"Alan Thorne," also known as Peter Jones, by the people who expect to adopt him, Judge Boyer ruled should be remanded into the custody of the respondents, Thomas Hudson Jones and Mildred Dudley Jones, of near Spinnerstown, and that the writ of habeas corpus be dismissed at the cost of the relator.

"Alan Thorne" is the natural son of the relator, Marian A. Ott, who testified he was born in a New York City hospital November 20, 1938, and that she gave him that name.

The respondents, who formerly lived near Mechanicsville, received custody of the child February 16, 1939, who has been making his home with them since that time.

In August, 1941, when the child was two and one-third years old, the mother, an unmarried nurse, told her parents of the birth of her son.

At a hearing held here November 25, 1941, the nurse-mother, who refused to divulge the name of the small boy's father on the witness stand, testified her parents would be glad to make a home for the child.

Conflicting testimony of abandonment on the part of the mother and adoption by the foster parents featured the hearing last Fall.

The Jones are members of the Bucks county celebrity colony. Mr. Jones being an internationally famous sculptor who executed the tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Washington, D. C.

In an opinion in the Court of Common Pleas, President Judge Hiram H. Keller in the matter of the petition of Joseph D. Baker, William O. Hunsicker and Calvin W. Moyer, County Commissioners, ruled that they are empowered to, and may, as administrators of the Bucks County Institutional District, employ legal counsel at the cost of $500 a year.

The sum may be made payable from the funds of the said district.

At a hearing held before President Judge Keller and Judge Boyer permission was granted.

To Make Soy Bean Loans In Bucks County Now

Loans for the production of soy beans are now available to Bucks county farmers, it is announced by the Emergency Crop and Feed Loan Office at Harrisburg.

This office, a unit of the Farm Credit Administration, is making loans up to $400 to be used for the purchase of seed and fertilizer and for paying other expenses necessary to produce this crop which is so vital to the war industry. Loans are secured by a first lien on the crop and are to be repaid when the crop is sold. The amount of the loan is determined by the acreage to be grown.

In addition to loans for soy beans the Emergency Crop and Feed Loan Office also makes loans on staple farm crops and livestock.

A representative from the Harrisburg office will be at the County Agent's office, Doylestown, Tuesday afternoon, April 21st. For the convenience of farmers in this county, however, arrangements have been made for applications to be accepted daily by John Bellow, Morrisville.

FIRE AT FUSEE PLANT IS BEING INVESTIGATED

Drying Room at Samuel Jackson Sons Co. Plant is Burned Out

NO IDEA AS TO THE LOSS

There was a fire at the fusee plant of Samuel Jackson Sons Co. last night. The plant, located along State Road, between Bristol and Croydon, makes fusees and various types of torches.

It was stated at the offices today that the fire had occurred in the drying room and that the origin and cause of the blaze was being investigated.

No idea as to the loss could be given. The blaze was confined to one of a group of corrugated iron buildings.

There was a powder flare, evidently, as tongues of flames leaped into the air, and were seen in Bristol, it is stated. Someone seeing these flames pulled the fire alarm at box 416, Otter and Linden streets.

The Bristol Consolidated Fire Department responded and also the Croydon Fire Co. The Croydon firemen went into service but the Bristol firemen did not.

Hose lines were stretched to the plant from fire hydrants along State Road.

No suspicion of sabotage is held.

PARENTS OF PUPILS SUSPENDED FROM SCHOOL ASK HEARING

May and Paul Anderson, Tullytown, Refuse to Salute Flag

PETITION SCHOOL BOARD

Board Grants Hearing For The Evening of April 14th

Bristol Public School Board, last night, was petitioned by Niles J. Anderson and Ida Anderson in behalf of their children, and by the children themselves, May and Paul Anderson, to grant them a hearing as the result of the suspension of the children from school. The children were suspended from the Bristol schools March 5th for their refusal to salute the flag and take the prescribed oath of allegiance.

The Anderson family are members of Jehovah's Witnesses, and contend that it is contrary to their religious beliefs for them to take the prescribed oath of allegiance to the flag. They say that they respect the flag but in accordance with their religious beliefs it would be idolatry and a violation of God's law if they did as requested in accordance with the public school code.

The School Board set the evening of April 14th for the hearing.

The Anderson children are non-resident children in the Bristol schools, being from the Tullytown school district. They are enrolled in the 10th and 11th grades.

The janitors of all school buildings were granted an increase in salary of $7.50 per month.

Mrs. Horace N. Davis and Mrs. William G. Harding, members of the school committee, reported having visited the high school building and the Wood street building and the cafeteria. Robert C. Ruel, although absent from the meeting, advised the Board that he had ordered a carload of coal.

David Hertzler, high school principal, reported that an average of three faculty meetings per week were being held. He also reported that guidance meetings were being held and that plans were being made for the evaluation of the high school on May 11th and 12th.

It was reported to the Board by Warren P. Snyder, superintendent of schools, that a number of truancy cases had been prosecuted and several had been fined. Other cases are pending.

The salary of William Doan, maintenance engineer, was increased $100 per year.

The proposed budget for the next fiscal year was considered by the Board as a whole after being presented by the finance committee.

One Man's Opinion By WALTER KIERNAN (I. N. S. Staff Writer)

The Automobile Workers' Union has opened the Spring capitalist plowing season with a proposition to hold family incomes to $25,000 annually for the duration of the war.

Just a few questions now and we will be ready to vote.

What becomes of the butlers, the first maids, the second maids, the governesses, the gardeners, the hostlers, the cooks and chefs who draw their wages from the rich?

What becomes of the social workers, the experimenters, the flossy front uplift organizations, the "foundation" workers who draw their wages or their support from the rich?

What becomes of the waiters at the Stork Club? The captains and crews of the yachts? The chauffeurs? The opera? The theatres?

Where does an idea in search of an angel go to register?

How does the President live on a $50,000 cut and what becomes of Mrs. Roosevelt who writes and lectures for pay and is the foremost pro-union writer and lecturer in the country.

The Favored Class

Washington, April 7. FOR more than a year now, the President, supporting the labor leaders with whom he has been politically allied since 1932, has frustrated the efforts of Congress to enact wartime modification of existing labor laws. The question is: Can he keep it up?

IN the past, when the pressure got too strong, the situation was met by passionate protestations of patriotism from the union spokes

BACK HOME OPINION

For the next two weeks the House will be in a state of partial adjournment, thus permitting the members, all of whom must stand for re-election next fall if they desire to retain their seats, to return to their home states to mend political fences. But those Congressmen who are really zealous in their desire to represent the people will use this time for other than partisan political purposes.

These are the Congressmen who will attempt to plumb the sentiment of their constituents on the great questions which face the nation and which Congress will have to deal with after it reconvenes. These will be the Congressmen most deserving of re-election.

What will the Congressmen want to find out from their constituents? Let them ascertain the attitude of the public, as distinguished from the paid high-pressure lobbyist opinion of Washington, toward the labor problem and toward excessive profits in the arms industry.

Let the Congressmen take the opportunity to sound out the public mind, through conferences with bonafide workmen and with the ordinary "man on the street," on the question of a public accounting of union finances, on the practice of unwarranted high union initiation fees, on jurisdictional strikes. And if the Congressmen will only ask, the citizen will be glad to tell him what he thinks of union racketeering which can not be prosecuted because there is no law to cover it.

Those Congressmen who are eager for more information might seek to learn the public view on Federal subsidies to farmers, on Congressional reluctance to prune non-war expenditures, on the delay in the enactment of the new tax bill, on excessive war order profits, and on the increase of bureaucracy. Let Congressmen be diligent in their search for information; let them remember what they learn; let them apply that knowledge when they return to Washington.

SINKING THE SUBS

Sinking or probable sinking of twenty-eight enemy submarines, as announced by the United States Navy, is proof that Uncle Sam's fleet and air arm have the submarine well in hand. Twenty-one of the undersea craft were disposed of in Atlantic waters and seven in Pacific.

This is the first authentic news the American public has received of the extent of counter measures against enemy submarines. The figures are extremely encouraging. And the war on these rattlesnakes of the deep is becoming constantly more effective. Hitler cannot long continue his all-out submarine warfare on Atlantic Coast shipping in the face of these constantly growing losses.

When a submarine is sent to the bottom by Yankee gunners or fliers, its entire crew of fifty to sixty men goes with it. At least there has been no news of any members of submarine crews being picked up at sea. Hitler's submarine warfare, like the kaiser's in the last war, has had a certain nuisance value but it will have no effect on the final outcome of the war nor will it prolong hostilities greatly.

British pilots dropped hundreds of tons of bombs on Germany in a single raid. This practice, if continued, should make an impression on the hardest object.

Crime at Castaway by EDITH BRISTOL

SYNOPSIS

Desperately in need of work, Gerry Lane becomes secretary to Walter Gregg, wealthy contractor and owner of Castaway Ranch, despite the warning of her predecessor that the people there are queer. Arriving at Castaway, she meets Estelle Gregg, the contractor's wife, a sophisticated, bleach-blond; Sydney Loftus, Estelle's cynical son; Martha, Gregg's middle-aged sister, who manages the household and breeds race horses; Harry Craven, Gregg's business manager, a dapper, moustached individual with piercing black eyes; and Lance Gregg, the contractor's bronzed, sturdy nephew, whom Loftus mockingly describes as "Our noble Sir Lancelot. He rides about righting wrongs." Gerry's employer is recuperating from an automobile accident and has already retired. At dinner, Lance starts the gathering when he mentions that someone is in the cabin at Hidden Cove, and that he will investigate. "Maybe it's Worth Durfee and you'll get a charge of buckshot for a welcome," suggests Loftus. "The way he feels now he'd welcome a slight case of murder." A sense of foreboding envelops Gerry. Why were they so upset over the presence of unknown guests? Who was Worth Durfee? Next morning, Gerry meets Walter Gregg and immediately likes this strong, unhappy man, who obviously feared someone or something. He cautions her that his files are confidential and must be locked and the key given to his personal servant, Kobe. As Gregg leaves his study for the day, he asks Gerry to finish the Durfee file first.

CHAPTER FOUR

It seems Worth Durfee, Gregg's neighbor at the north, had been engaged in litigation with his employer for years over a boundary, the file disclosed. Gregg, finally, had won the battle.

Driving an automobile with faulty lights, Worth Durfee was the man whose car had sent Gregg's machine hurtling through the fog and darkness to the cliffs below. A damage suit for $50,000—the so records told me—followed the accident. And Gregg, carried into court on a stretcher, must have made a good witness in his own behalf. For he won the suit. The case, now under appeal, might be settled if Gregg would accept the compromise of cash offered by Durfee—that offer, as yet unanswered, was the last paper I added to the file before I carefully returned it to its drawer and locked the steel cabinet.

Now the top of the desk was clear. Tomorrow I'd start on the files of the Gallina Dam—and from the mass of letters, specifications, papers of all kinds, accumulated during Mr. Gregg's illness, on that tremendous piece of construction, I could see weeks and weeks of work before me. The exact type of work I loved—bringing order out of chaos.

Gallina dam! If I could have known as I first handled those blueprints and lists, that whole vast pile of office records, what the words "Gallina dam"—were to mean to me, I might have turned in panic and fled from the quiet study. Instead I attacked the job with vigor—just watch my stride as I put this confusion in order!

The room was so still that the sound of light footsteps in the patio made me look up with a start—a woman in white opened one of the French windows along the passage and crossed cautiously into the study. She started at the sight of me.

She was tall and angular, middle-aged and undistinguished, except for a distinctly furtive look. Her dress was a nurse's uniform, but she wore no cap and her dark hair was streaked with gray. She wore a hearing device and, after a long pause, when she spoke, her voice had that peculiar, toneless quality of the very deaf.

I spoke first: "Were you looking for someone?"

She waited before answering. Her eyes were not on me, but on a photograph that hung over the filing cabinet. I turned to see what attracted her. I had noticed the photograph before—Walter Gregg, standing by a steam shovel, marked "First work on site of Gallina dam." It was a very poor picture, I had noticed earlier in the day, for the figure of Walter Gregg was almost blocked out of sight by another man whom I recognized as his assistant, Harry Craven.

The woman waited so long that I repeated my question: "Did you wish to see someone?"

"I have a message for Mr. Gregg."

"I'm sorry, but Mr. Gregg is resting now, and cannot be disturbed." "From Miss Dawson?" the grim-looking woman said, emphatically.

"But I cannot disturb Mr. Gregg now." Why hadn't I asked about callers? Suppose this was someone who had the right to interrupt—I was desperately anxious not to make a mistake. I was afraid of offending the caller if she had the right to see Mr. Gregg—afraid of both-ering him.

"Let me call Miss Gregg," I suggested hopefully. "Perhaps she'll take the message to her brother."

The woman in white shook her head—it seemed to me that she brought her eyes from the picture with an effort.

"Won't you make yourself comfortable here?" I offered her a chair, "and I'll call Miss Gregg."

"All right," she said. "I've come all the way from Hidden Cove and I don't want to go back until I've delivered my message. Tell her it's from Miss Dawson."

I stepped into the hall. The telephones were arranged with connections in both bedroom and study; but the inner call system that worked by pressing a buzzer was on the wall of the passage, a few steps to the side of the doorway.

Hidden Cove—the mystery—the house where the smoke rising from the chimney told of uninvited guests! I felt my pulse beat faster as I pressed the button marked "Martha Gregg" on the signal board of the house telephone. No answer. I tried it again. Not a sound in the study, not a sound in the rest of the big house. My awkward fingers pressed hard on the buzzer. I must bring Miss Gregg, wherever she was. Still no answer. I tried the button marked "kitchen."

Suppose there really was a mystery about Hidden Cove. It sounded very menacing last night. This woman in white might be a criminal. Already I was beginning to imagine things in this atmosphere of Castaway. I pressed the kitchen bell again and this time a voice answered—Issu's, I think.

"Please find Miss Gregg at once and ask her to come to the study," I said. "Tell her it's important."

"Yes, thank you, I find her," the boy said, and I hung up. I stepped back into the study.

"Miss Gregg will be here in a few minutes," I began, but stopped. The room was empty.

The French window was open and I crossed to look from it beyond the flower-filled patio and up the slope of the garden. Around the end of the east wing of the big house I saw the figure of the woman in white moving with the same furtive air that marked her entrance into the study. I watched her as she crossed the garden and disappeared around the guest cottages, half way up the hill.

Then I turned to look back in the study. Everything was in order, just as I left it. But was it?

Over the steel cabinet a dark square showed plainly against the lighter wall—the square that told where the photograph of Walter Gregg had been hanging.

The picture, as well as the woman, was gone. And if I had caught, then, the slithering of that missing photograph, it might have been the first step to solve the mystery, the grief, the tragedy that were to engulf us at Castaway in the next few weeks.

The dark square on the study wall was—although we did not know it—an omen of the dark, ugly, threatening things that lay ahead. I heard Miss Gregg's quick, firm step as she came down the hall, whistling to the spaniels that trotted beside her. . . .

I felt sick at heart. Here in my very first day of the new job that was so important to me, I might have made a fatal blunder. Perhaps I should not have admitted the woman in white at all—perhaps I should have taken her message directly to my employer.

Whatever I should have done, I reproached myself, I had bungled it—and the dark mark on the wall, where the Gallina Dam photograph had been hanging, flaunted its reproach in my flaming face as Martha stepped into the study.

She stood like a statue while I told her what had happened, stammering my embarrassment. Her brown face was a blank, her hands stuck in the pockets of her sweater as she listened to my recital.

"Don't take it so to heart, my dear child," she laid her hand over my shoulder and I loved her from that moment because of the reassurance in her deep voice. Even the dogs pricked up their silky ears and wagged their tails at the kindness in her husky tones.

"But I should not have left her alone, Miss Gregg." I suppose my face showed my dismay. "I let her take the photograph away."

"Nothing to worry about. Just one of our family skeletons come home to roost. Come, look up the study and come outside. You've been working in here steadily all day. You need a bit of air. I'll take the cabinet key to my brother. It's fine and fresh outside—storm coming tomorrow. Come, Ace! Come, Deuce!" She opened the door and the spaniels leaped with joy at the sound of their names. I didn't leap—but I was as pleased as the dogs at the prospect of a walk.

We crossed the patio, up the slope of the garden, through the trees and then across the dry, brown hills toward the edge of the cliffs. Where the western sky had been gold and crimson last night, it was now purple and gray, and the wind blowing in from the Pacific was already heavy with moisture.

"Feels good, doesn't it?" Miss Gregg threw back her square shoulders, drank deep of the sea breeze. The dogs padded happily beside us over the dry grass.

"I've been so happy here," I confessed, "you'll never know how much it means to me that you don't feel I have made a hopeless blunder. All day I've been enjoying my work so much, feeling sure that Mr. Gregg would be satisfied. Then, when this happened, I was afraid for a minute I might have spoiled everything."

"Don't give it another thought," Martha was brusque as her brother. "I'll tell you something about this family skeleton—then you'll see you have nothing to worry about. About the picture—I have another one just like it. We'll hang mine on that wall and say nothing to anybody about it."

"You're terribly kind," I began, but Miss Gregg wouldn't let me finish. We had reached the edge of the cliff by this time and could feel the salt, stinging flavor of the sea as the wind blew in our faces.

"Not kind at all," Martha chuckled. "I've been keeping worries from my brother for so many years that if I didn't have that to do I'd be like a hen without chicks. We're twins, you know."

Now that she mentioned the relationship I could see it clearly. "Like as two peas," she continued. "We've been orphans since we were children and I've always had to save my brother from all the worries I could. He's had plenty of 'em. But once in a while one gets by me."

What's the Answer?

What is the origin of the word "laundry"?

ANSWER: The word "laundry" comes from "lavender", meaning a washwoman.

What is the easiest way to find the laundries in your vicinity?

ANSWER: You'll find that your local laundries, conveniently listed in the Yellow Pages of your Bell Telephone Directory, offer a variety of services to fit your needs. Haulers, Paint Dealers, and many other services are also listed in the Yellow Pages.

You can save time and many steps these busy days by consulting the Yellow Pages when you want to know "where to buy it" or who will do the job.

Model Victory Garden Yields
Food for Body, Flowers for Morale

Plan for a Victory Garden for a Family of Four.

A Victory Garden planned to provide fresh vegetables for a family of four during a period of four months, is shown in the plan which accompanies this article.

It will occupy a space 24x50 feet, such as is usually available in a back yard in a suburb or outlying city location. Both food and flowers will be grown in this garden, which will be beautiful as well as productive. Much of the space has been given to a path, and to flower borders in front and rear; but plenty is left for a long list of nutritious vegetables, rich in vitamins, which will enable the family table to be furnished with an appetizing variety of food.

The list of crops has been made after careful consideration of the family needs and preferences, the probable yield and the nutritional values of the vegetables to be grown. Wherever there has been a choice between a nutritious, and a non-nutritious form of a given vegetable, the nutritious form has been chosen. The flowers, to be grown in borders along the path, and at the front and rear of the vegetable rows, are both ornamental in the garden, and suitable for cutting for use in the house.

Here is the list of flowers and vegetables, each numbered or lettered to indicate its position on the plan.

- | | |
|----------------------------|--|
| 1—Pole Lima Beans on fence | 18—Spring onions |
| 2—Cucumbers | 19—Peas |
| 3—Wax beans | 20—Chard |

| C—Gladioli | K—On arbor, |
| D—Gladioli | red, white and blue morning glories |
| E—Red, White & Blue Cenn | |
| F—Salpiglossis | |

In the rows where early crops have been planted which may be entirely consumed in time to make succession plantings, the following will be planted as second crops:

- | | |
|---------------|--------------------|
| 3—Beets | 12—Green beans |
| 4—Green beans | 17—Onion sets |
| 6—Cos lettuce | 19—Chinese Cabbage |
| 7—Onion sets | 21—Winter Radishes |
| 9—Carrots | 26—Wax Beans |
| 10—Endive | |

This garden is planned to produce a continuous yield throughout the harvest season. Rich feeding and care will combine to produce a heavy yield from small space, and the vegetables so grown will contain maximum nutritive values, and excel in tenderness and flavor.

BENSALEM HIGH SCHOOL NINE WINS PRACTICE TILT, DEFEATING FALLSINGTON BY SCORE OF 11 TO 6

FALLSINGTON, Apr. 8.—Bensalem and Fallsington opened their 1942 baseball season with a practice tilt on the local field. By scoring nine runs in the first inning, the Bensalem team managed to emerge the victor, 11-6.

Coch "Mike" DeRisi's starting hurler, Frank Wills, had trouble in the initial frame when he walked three batters, allowed two hits, and was the victim of a team-mate error. Before the fire could be put out, he was relieved by DiNatale and nine runs were across.

DiNatale's slow ball had the Owl batters baffled and after that first frame was over the Bensalem batters were held to but a pair of hits.

Roberts did the hurrying for the winners and held the Falls batters to seven hits, three of which came in the fourth session when the Orange and Black pushed over a quartet of runs. Roberts struck out 12 batters.

"Artie" Driscoll had a bad day at third base for the Fallsington team, committing four errors. "Pete" Everitt, Al Monti and Driscoll led the batters, the former getting three hits and the latter two, a pair each.

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — (INS) — Uncle Sam and his thousands of postmen serve as the "circulation department" for a new library project recently developed at the Pennsylvania State College.

To meet a growing demand from organizations through the State for reference books and similar reading material, the extension services of the college have inaugurated a "packet library service."

Through it any group or individual can obtain books, pamphlets and magazines on a wide variety of subjects ranging all the way from home nursing to hemispheric defense. The service is designed to supplement local library facilities. Only charges are mailing costs and a small handling fee.

FILLING THE BILL - - By Jack Sordis

can be cared for through proclamation, plans however before taking such action, to ask full co-operation on the part of the populace, asking that cars not be parked on the streets all night, as this causes a traffic hazard. If co-operation is not secured, council will be forced to take action, it is stated.

The question of large numbers of dogs, licensed and unlicensed, roaming the streets, was also considered. No dog owner, it was pointed out, has the privilege of permitting a dog to be at large. If the nuisance is not abated councilmen claim they will act. The matter was placed in the hands of the proper officials.

All street lights were reported burning. Two bids were received for street work in the borough, and these were referred to the highway committee. The shoulder on Beaver street is to be repaired; and later some work at intersections is to be done.

In the report of the borough treasurer, Miss Grace H. Hillick, a total of $134.24 in bills was listed, the balance in the treasury being $632.58.

STAMP-A-DAY

FRANKFORT, Ky. — (INS) — Defense stamp and bond sales are soaring in this area through widespread adoption of the unique "defense-stamp-a-day" purchase plan started by Mrs. Howard Vaughn, employee at the Schenley plant here, who arranged for each of her 600 fellow workers to buy at least one stamp a day. The plan was so successful that a county committee was formed to encourage its adoption by other firms.

Lawrence McGlynn, 521 Bath street, Bristol, was granted a parole on condition that he pay a support order of $12.50 a week. He was committed to prison December 24, 1941, because of contempt of a court order by Judge Keller.

Everitt Robinson, a Negro, of Philadelphia, who was sentenced to prison March 3, because of contempt of a court order, was paroled by Judge Keller on condition that he pay a non-support order of $12.50 a week.

Anthony Cilestio, Bath Road, Bristol, R. D. 1, who was committed to the County Prison February 3, was released in his own recognizance in the sum of $500 to comply with a previous support order made for his son by Judge Boyer.

son was granted to authorize the sale of Myers' school, near Hagersville, in appeared in Judge Hiram H. Keller's Court this morning, on a petition for a rule to show cause why a $10 support order should not be increased. His wife, Agnes, was a witness. She lives with a son in Lansdale.

Mrs. Gerhart testified that the $10 support order is used up on doctor bills and food for special diet. She told the Court she is too sick to work because of an aggravated heart condition.

Mrs. Gerhart further testified that her husband owns the Richlandtown Hotel, a house in Telford, a house near Souderton and some farm land.

"I require more than $10 a week for my support because I am physically unable to work," Mrs. Gerhart testified.

The Gerharts were married 28 years when they separated in 1939. Mrs. Gerhart told the Court she was "thrown out of her home."

At the first hearing in this case, an entire day was occupied taking testimony.

Attorney C. William Freed, of Quakertown, counsel for Gerhart, asked Mrs. Gerhart if she would go back with her husband if he provided a home for her.

The Court ruled that Mrs. Gerhart did not have to answer because the Court had ruled at a previous hearing that she did not have to go back with him.

Mrs. Gerhart denied that her husband ever asked her to come back and live with him.

Harrington Gerhart, Lansdale, milk salesman and son of the prosecutrix, testified that his mother has been with him about a month. She pays no board, he testified.

"You are the cause of this separation are you not?" Attorney Freed asked the witness.

"Absolutely not," the witness replied.

"You don't have to answer the question," the Court remarked.

On the witness stand, Gerhart testified that he paid $12,000 for the Richlandtown Hotel and has it all paid but $6,000. The defendant testified that he took in $9649.50 at the hotel in 1941 and his expenses were $7186.24. Taking other expenses off, the hotel profit was about $1600 for the year.

The Court questioned the defendant as to his other incomes.

Mrs. Todd Says 'Japs' Treat Her Very Well

she is well treated however by the Japanese. Mrs. Todd is connected with the Todd Hospital, Canton, China, which institution was operated for years by her late husband.

It was in 1905 that Mrs. Todd went to China as a missionary nurse.

In a letter dated December 18th, and received here just recently, she states:

"Much has happened since December 7th. Next day the Japanese came at seven a. m., and I was told to prepare for Shamen. They did not come for me until three o'clock, and two faithful nurses as servants. We could take all the needed bedding. Dr. Matthew Wong and his wife and Stephen and his wife left that p. m., taking their all to Dr. Matt's wife's father's place. Nurses and servants left the next day. Tuesday, 9th, word came that I could return and had I not been visiting on Shamen could have returned that evening.

"When we returned Wednesday a. m., the Japanese all cleared out, and before the day was over we were all back, bag and baggage. The next day we had quite a few office patients. That night the two midwives took in a patient who was delivered of a son, so was another who came in Friday a. m. . . . The group on the other side of the alley have always been friendly to us and no one has been any better treated than we.

"The big thing is that we are all together and well. Not being able to get out is a bit irksome, but I can use the phone and go over to Y. W. compound. If I could only hear from my boys.

"We hear that all women and children were evacuated to valley or island and allowed to take one blanket and bowl, chopsticks and all the clothing they could put on their back, which is good for we have had bitter cold.

"Of course we get no papers. River closed and we had to put away our radio, so news is via grape vine and is really quite good. What of Christmas? Preparations go on in the church groups. Sam borrowed our victrola and Christmas record. Thank the Lord that the church can be kept open and work carried on.

"So far we are taking in enough to supply our needs. Yesterday we had two men and one woman come with saws and ax to cut up the trunk of a tree that was cut down months ago. It will give us fire wood."

In her letter dated January 13th, Mrs. Todd says:

"Have just found that we can send via air, a round about way, and I'm so thankful for all His goodness to us.

"Christmas Day we had the family Y. W. and their families and our son and three friends outside for nine o'clock breakfast of fish congee, coffee and fruit.

"Pictures first. We had one Japanese woman and three Japanese lieutenants next door and also a Japanese missionary. Gave each a copy and they had 300 copies made and sent to Japan.

"Plan to go to Shamen tomorrow. Must go to get pass, but it is granted nicely. Truly God is good to us. We believe the food situation is much more acute in Hong Kong than here.

"Mostly below 50 degrees, and fuel hard to get and expensive. We're thinning out our trees. The girls had a padded coat and padded knickers made for me. Last night I said to Miss Poon as she was tucking me in: 'I am your big baby, and you have real ones to take care of.' I really am very very well.

"We get no outside mail."

The Great Game of Politics

have put Mr. Roosevelt so definitely on the defensive in this labor business that some concession or compromise is expected to emanate shortly either from the White House or from the Messrs. Murray and Green, representing, respectively, the CIO and the AFL. The first—and certainly not the least—of these developments was the Gallup poll, which showed 75 per cent. of the American people favoring an extension of the forty-hour week to forty-eight hours.

—O—

THE second was the action of the Senate last week in forcing Senator Barkley, the Administration leader, to agree to take up, on April 20, the Connally bill to freeze existing labor relations. A third was the statement of Senator Claude Pepper, of Florida, generally regarded as a subservient White House follower, of his intention to push forty-hour modification at the earliest opportunity. A fourth was the declaration in favor of a forty-eight-hour week by Speaker Rayburn of the House. And, finally, there is the letter of Senator George, of Georgia, in which he personally pleads with the President to use his influence to have labor voluntarily accept the forty-eight-hour-week suggestion. In the light of these things, it is difficult to see how Mr. Roosevelt and his labor allies can maintain their position. With Mr. Nelson and the Administration propagandists calling for unstinted effort and general sacrifices in the interests of production, it does not make sense, because of labor-leader threats, to be warned off the forty-hour-week law, which stands in the way of production and increases the cost of our war effort by billions of dollars.

—O—

THERE is no doubt now of early Congressional action to limit profits of defense contractors, and steps already are being taken to recover for the Government undue profits already made. These excesses cannot be too severely condemned, and almost everybody is in accord as to the desirability of drastic action to end them. But the full strength of America cannot be used in this war (and without it the war cannot be won) if labor is to remain the one favored class in the country; the one class of which no sacrifices are required; the one class permitted to enrich itself at the expense of the rest—not only to hold on to what it has but to reach for more.

—O—

THE labor lobbyists are doing the mass of American workmen a great injustice by putting them in that position. It is not a tenable position and if maintained too long may cause more trouble than the other way. The outstanding fact is the one upon which Senator George's plea is based. Such is the strength of the President with organized labor that if he were to tell it that this crisis made it necessary temporarily to relinquish the forty-hour week, labor as a whole would accept the President's statement and follow his lead. Nor would the labor leaders be able to stand against him. If he should lead labor along that road, then he would be leading the country in the way it wants to go. As it is, he is standing in the way of the public desire, which is all right when the desire is misdirected but very bad when it is rightly directed. What a thrilling response Mr. Roosevelt would get from the nation if at the same time that he moved to curb profits on war contracts, he moved to induce labor to yield on this one vital point! Both of these things ought to be done; and both he can do if he has the will to do them.

Yes'm, until manufacturers can once again turn out home electric appliances, we must learn to treat our present ones with "kid gloves". Yanking cords CAN bring serious troubles. Wasteful use or abuse of ALL electric servants is decidedly bad form these days. Instead, our all-out Victory effort demands that we conserve what we have and make it last for the duration.
